- D. It's going to be August 6.
- P. Tuesday night! (expletive deleted) W6RGG expects to have an NCCC meeting on Tuesday night?
- D. Yes. I understand it is going to be in the Knowland Room of the Red Cross Communications Center in Oakland.
- P. That is in the East Bay. Oakland! (expletive deleted) We didn't get many votes from there. We could send Segretti to break it up, but that would not be right. Are there other options, you know, other alternatives available to us?
- D. Well, we could call in the FBI or the CIA. After all, they are going to be talking about Asians. You know, JA's, VS6's, UA0's, etc. Probably rehashing the All Asia Phone and planning for the cw contest. We could always claim national security. . . .
- P. Yes, but the Tribune might get hold of that. This place, the Knowland Room, that's at 2111 East Fourteenth Street, isn't it?
- D. Right. Where Fourteenth crosses Twenty-second Avenue. It's not too far from where the Twenty-third Avenue off ramp comes off the Nimitz. You know, we could send Howard and the boys over there just to listen in.
- P. No. Howard's too sloppy. Hasn't learned yet how to close doors behind him . . . I've got it! These (characterization deleted) contesters--they're all a bunch of drunkards. Suppose we have the police bust up the meeting?
- D. It won't work. There's no alcohol allowed in the Red Cross building so they won't have their usual beer and wine there. Probably they'll go drinking in some nearby pub after the meeting--but remember the pay-offs we get from the tavern owners. We can't very well hassle them there.
- P. You're entirely correct in thinking that (inaudible). Well, John, what do you suggest we do? We can't just give up. History is watching us, you know. We've got to protect the office.
- D. Well, we could try beating them at their own game. I'll go single band on twenty, and you can go multi with Julie and David . . .
- P. (expletive deleted) (characterization deleted) Shut up, John!
- D. (inaudible)
